Personal Note

One never knows where you might find a friend. Bob was a special friend. I miss his humor, wit, and weekly visits to my office where we would discuss local politics over a cup of coffee. He would ask "how's my dog," meaning Jazzy, my terrier mix, who comes to work with me. She is quite suspicious and gruff towards strangers, but being a good judge of character, as dogs often are, she and Bob became good friends.

Bob was a true "southern gentleman" and a real "people person." He was the type of person who leaves a lasting impression on you and my life is richer for having known him. He had such a big personality and is very much missed by his family, friends, and community. I know he's in a better place and I look forward to "chewing the fat" with him again some day.

Godspeed Bob,

Andrea
